

Executive AI Leadership Circle

Build your team's AI judgement – and decide together what AI means for your organisation.

A shared language, firsthand experience and a clearer basis for making choices about AI - where it helps, what risks matter and what it means for the organisation you lead.

How it works

Between sessions, executives work on practical challenges relevant to their roles, responsibilities and organisation.

In six live, facilitated 60-minute sessions, the team talks honestly about what happened, makes sense of it together and works out what it means for the organisation.

The work covers useful AI practice, prompts and context, value, risk, configured tools and agentic AI, and learning and leading with AI.

What your team leaves with

A common language and shared starting point for discussing AI.

A more useful AI practice: where it helps, what to check and where to draw the line.

Personal AI risk and leadership positions, with differences across the team made visible.

Shared questions and next decisions - what needs agreement and what needs an organisational response.

What's included

Six facilitated sessions, between-session challenges, curated resources and templates. A Personal AI Risk Position and an AI Leadership Position for each executive. A starting Executive AI Fluency Snapshot, a closing learning check-in and a Cohort Insights Report on reported practice, questions, ideas and recommended next steps.

"The AI Leadership Circle created a safe, practical way for our team to explore AI without overpromising or oversimplifying the risks. It helped us build shared understanding, discover real applications, and start using AI more confidently and responsibly in our work."

Humanitarian Advisory Group - Executive team

What does your team need to work out about AI?

Bring the questions and decisions you are facing. We will agree the focus, timing and investment in a tailored proposal.

Book an AI leadership conversation | sue@uncertaintylab.com.au